THERE is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other dis-eases put together, and until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by E. J. Cheney & Co. manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure in the market. It is taken inter-nally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. How the Movement is Growing in the State.

The following gentlemen have been nominated thus far for the legislature by honest men of all parties on the question of pure elections, the paramount issue at present in Virginia, where for years it has been considered perfectly consistent with political orthodoxy to uphold vote-stealing:

For the Senate-Fourth district (Montgomery, Roanoke, Roanoke city and Craig), M. H. Claytor: Twentyfourth district, (Pittsylvania, Danville and Neapolis), W. W. Cobb.

For the House-Shenandoah, W. A. Sager; Prince Edward, Colin Stokes;

An Houest Election Caudidate.

Mr. T. B. Dunn, of Henry district Hanover county, has announced himself an independent candidate for the house of delegates from that county. His platform is as follows: "The absolute repeal or amendment of the Walton election law, for as it stands upon our statue books it is the most gigantic fraud of the nineteenth century " Mr. Dunn has allliated heretofore with the Democrats and this break is with surprise by many of his friends, although he says that it is at the solicitation of hundreds of them that he becomes a candidate.—Richmond Star.

M PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND.

An Absolute Cure for the Worst Cases of Rheumatism.

The Plain Language of Mr. Oscar Pike The Greatest of All Remedies Accompiished His Cure After Many Months of Weakness and Suffering-No Tedious Walting for Improvement.

Psine's celery compound is the one known specific for the cure of rheums-

And it does not need a tedious trial to prove it.

The effect of this best of remedies is straightway felt. Not a week goes by before the pains of rheumatism diminish.

Thousands of men and woman have told of the days and nights of pain and feebleness exchanged in a few weeks feebleness exchanged in a few weeks for activity and strength.

Faine's celery compound has won the reputation of being the remedy "that makes people well." Its good works extend from Oregon to Maine. In every State in the Union there has been piled up in the newspapers and medical journals a tremendous amount of indisputable evidence of the curative power of nals a tremendous amount of indisputable evidence of the curative power of Paine's celery compound over all forms of nervous debility and diseases of the blood. It cures after nature's plan, by affording nutrition for every part of the body, overhauling the worn-out tissues and supplying new brain and nerve material, sending pure blood through the veins, invigorating the whole averter.

veins, invigorating the whole system and removing the cause of disease.

Mr. Oscar Pike, a well known resident of Princeton, Maine, recently sent the following unsolicited letter to the proprietors of this wonderful remedy:

"Two years ago I was taken sick with what the doctors called the grip I was improving when I took on a violent cold and chill. Then rheumatism set in, first in the joints of my shoulders, then first in the joints of my shoulders, then down my hands and arms, then allover. Feet, hands and legs swelled. I could not put my hand to my head; could not throw the clothes off from me; could not dress or undress myself, nor get out of my chair without help. For a year and a half I tried all kinds of medicines and sarsaparillas, with little or no relief. I was 73 years old. Someone told me to try Paine's celery compound. After I had taken three bottles I found a marked improvement. I have now taken twelve bottles, and the result is I eat and sleep well, do my own work, and go about as usual, getting in and out of my carriage without help I have been tempted to put an article in the local paper for the benefit of those that are afflicted as I have

Mr. Pike is well known in his locality. He is the founder and president of the North Washington Agricultural Society and Trotting Association. When he goes for his mail, he says, people ask him what he has been doing that he is im-proving so of late, and he answers as do thousands of others throughout the

UNLUCKY TO SAVE FROM DROWNING. Some Queer Superstitions of People the World Over

It seems strange that swimmers should be superstitious, yet it is so, nor is it alone the small boy who sees his companion sinking into a watery grave without attempting to rescue him, whether he sank because he was not an expert and got beyond his depth, or whether he was seized with cramps. It seems ridiculous to think of, and no doubt it will save many a superstitious person from risking his own neck by being dragged under by the weight and struggles of a drowning person to know it is counted unlucky and worse than madness to try to save the life of a drowning person or to resuscitate him, as sooner or later he is bound to do you some mean turn. It is another one of these old spierstitions handed down from generation to generation from our European ancestors, and of which no one knows the derivation. Traces of it are found among the Sioux and other tribes of the Indians of the west, who seem to have inherited that belief from their forefathers along with so many other quaint things. They still believe, and it's a part of their creed, that in hunting the body of a drowned person you can discover its resting place by floating a chip of cedar wood, which will stop, even in the strongest current, and turn around over the exact spot. In Great Britain the belief that you must not rescue a drowning person is most prevalent in Cornwall and various parts of Scotland. The French sailor and the boatman of the Danube bow to the decree, together with the Russians, and let the people drown.

Dr. Taylor, in his "Primitive Cul-ture," declares this lingering fondness for this old creed is because the water spirit is angry at being despoiled of its victim, and should the unlucky person who has dared to frustrate him trust himself to the water's power he will drown as sure as fate.

The Bohemian fisherman shrinks from snatching a drowning man from the waters, fearing the water demon will take away his luck in fishing and drown him before he gets to shore with the would be victim. In Germany, when some one is drowned, they say,
"The river spirit claims his yearly sacrifice," or, "The Nix has taken him."

The belief is current not alone in those countries above mentioned, but the Kamehatkans, rather than help a man out of the water, would force him under, and if he should escape to the shore no one would dare receive him into his house or dare to give him food. He is supposed to be dead after once falling into the water.

Taking Desperate Chances. Mr. Billus-It's very kind of you,

Maria, but I'd rathe: buy my eigars myself. Seven for 10 cents is rather too

Mrs. Billus-I know that's cheap, but I thought there might be one good one in the seven.—Chicago Tribune.

LONG GLOVES.

Economy In Long Gloves-A Dutch Lady's

Now that short sleeves and long gloves are again in vogue for daylight wear luncheon often involves an exposure of the arms to which women object who are ac arms to which women object who are accustomed to appearing in full or demi tollet only under the protecting veil of gaslight.

Fashionable women simply pull forward the glove, extricate the fingers, push the glove back up the arm again and tuck the hand part of the glove inside that portion that is above the wrist. This is impurious that is above the wrist. This is ingenious, but not nearly so convenient and econom-ical as the plan adopted by a lady in Hol-land. Her long cream colored suede gloves

Trached well above the elbows, but she only had to remove the portion that covered the hands and wrists. These, the gloves preper, were quite separate from the long arm covering. After luncheon she replaced her gloves, tucked them up under the suede of the long arm pieces and covered the junction with many bracelets. Now we all know that the glove mer. lets. Now we all know that the glove part wears out very quickly, while the rest is perfectly fresh and uninjured, so that the Dutch lady's is a very economical plan. Why should we not adopt it? One long pair of gloves costs double the price of a pair with four buttons and the conpair with four buttons, and the upper part would outlast several hand coverings. Evening gloves of the usual length cost between $3 and $4 a pair, and if they are light and delicate in tint, as they usually are can be worn but once. Fresh gloves and neat shoes are a more essential part of evening toilet than the gown itself, and cleaned gloves are always so obvious as being cleaned that they are not a safe

A sketch is given of a bodice of straw taffeta. A wide insertion of rich lace is arranged to simulate a yoke. The back of the bedice and the lower part of the front are veiled with mousseline de sole, and under the bust are placed two large knots of mousseline, with lace trimmed ends The balloon clow sleeves are also covered with mousseline de soie. The collar is composed of ribbon and two lace choux. This blouse is worn with a skirt of blataffeta.

VARIOUS NOTES.

What Kind of Veils to Wear-Grasscloth and Duck.

Brown gossamer veils are said to protect the complexion better than any other kind. Blue veils give the wearer a cadav-erous look, and red ones are not good form. White and black are the most becoming and are always in style.

Drill, duck and holland have had a great cogue this summer, and it is to be hoped will be worn another year, they are so serv-iceable and neat.

Navy blue serge, which is perennially fashionable, is much employed by ladies' tallors for seeside, golfing and bleyeling suits as well as for general plain wear.

Now that the season of 'linen gowns is passing it is confessed that linen as a dress material is not activated.

material is not entirely satisfactory. It is enticing in the piece, but it leses freshness even in the making up, and mist or dampness of any sort reduces it to an unpardon able stringiness. To look well it requires to be laundered before each wearing, and laundered by an expert at that, while cheap cotton cambries and lawns may be worn a number of times without showing Grasseloth, so much worn during the summer, is also with us this fall. It is plain, or has a colored spot or check, or is embroidered, although in the latter case it is much more expensive and really less at-tractive. The charm of this coarse mate-rial lies in its simplicity, and if expense and elaboration are desired they are more appropriate in connection with some finer sort of goods.

After a winter as long and severe as the after a winter as long and severe as the last the approach of cold weather again is not as welcome as it sometimes is. Autumn and early winter fashions, now announced, strike a chill to the heart, and one would rather retain longer the filmy summer gowns that have been so charming a characteristic of the departing season.

An illustration is given of a fashionable and elaborate cape. It is composed of a yoke embroidered with spangles, from which falls a flounce of tulle embroidered with jet. At the head of this is a full drapery of gauze held in place with estrich tips. Two frills of tulle sustained by tips form the therior, called tips. Two tries of form the flaving collar.
